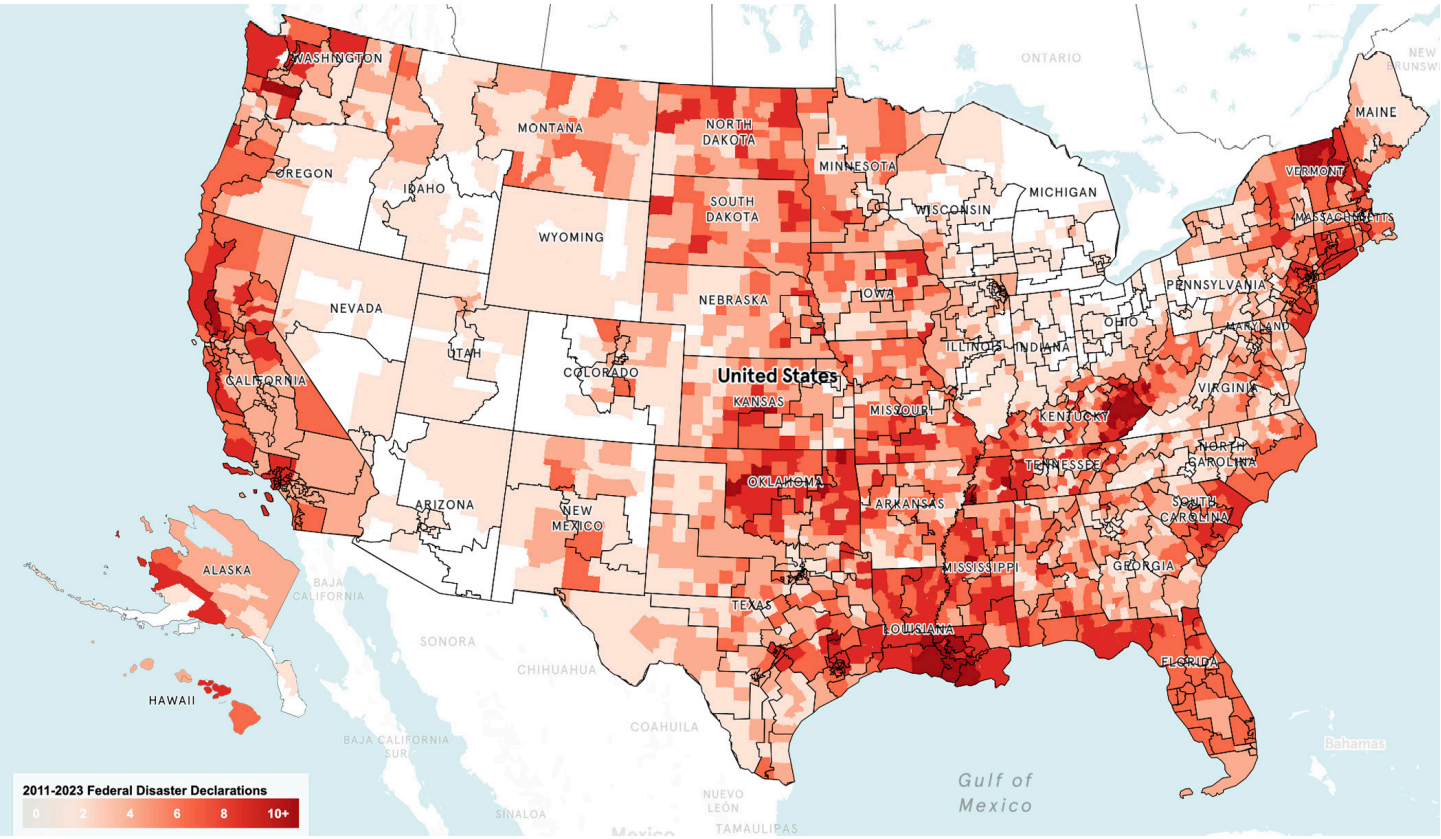
EXECUTIVE SUMMARY



As extreme weather continues to impact the U.S., Rebuild by Design launched the Atlas of Accountability, a mapping tool designed to help communities and policymakers understand their localized, climate-fueled exposure to extreme weather disasters. The tool builds on Rebuild by Design's 2022 report, "Atlas of Disaster," which analyzes county-level extreme weather disaster declarations and post-disaster federal assistance. The analysis highlights the urgency of bipartisan cooperation and the need to unite across the urban-rural divide.

91% OF CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICTS include a county that received a major disaster declaration for extreme weather between 2011 and 2023, amounting to $106.4 BILLION in federal post-disaster assistance from FEMA and HUD CDBG-DR.

WE CAN WORK TOGETHER

While these numbers seem bleak, there are actions we can take to protect communities lives and livelihoods. Rebuild by Design is calling for:

1. Shifting post-disaster federal dollars for pre-disaster funding so communities can in invest infrastructure before they suffer.
2. Creating new sources of dedicated funding such as investigating state voter referendums, surcharges on certain types of insurance coverage (e.g., property and casualty), and state-level superfund laws.
3. Mandating that U.S. insurance companies take into account mitigation measures when pricing insurance policies, giving policyholders incentives to take small actions that will save all taxpayers money, just as FEMA does with the National Flood Insurance Program's Community Rating System.
4. Creating better infrastructure: ensuring that every piece of new infrastructure is built to withstand climate events to the life cycle of that infrastructure; is designed infrastructure to address both physical and social vulnerabilities, thus multiplying taxpayers investments.
5. Amending the Stafford Act to ensure that heat waves are treated the same as other federal disasters, deploying resources to communities who have been suffering with no end in sight.
